AROUND THE SEC

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW

In truth, this is not expected to be a fair fight. Tennessee lost almost everything from the 2013 version of its o-line, and Oklahoma pretty much returns everything from a group that helped sack AJ McCarron seven times in the Sugar Bowl last season. On a Saturday that does not feature a ton of compelling matchups, we want to see how the Vols can hold up against a veteran Sooner front.

Can Tennessee hang with OU?

Give the Vols credit, they're not scared to schedule games with major out-of-conference programs. And give them credit for being 2-0. But can they hang with the Sooners? It won't be easy.

by: Wes Mitchell

Can Arkansas beat Texas Tech?

The Razorbacks don't really win SEC games anymore these days. They're a two-point underdog to the Red Raiders. That's not a good look.

Vandy gets on the board?

The start to the Derek Mason Era in Nashville hasn't gone as planned as they're 0-2 and it hasn't even been close. But they should get a win this week over the Minutemen of Massachusetts, who have lost eight games in a row and 24 of their last 26.

DEMARCUS ROBINSON

Florida Sophomore WR

by: Aaron Weiss

SEC PLAYER YOU SHOULD KNOW

We finally got the opportunity to see the Gators play last week, and they did not disappoint against lowly Eastern Michigan. Florida was able to start switching between QBs and running backs early on, but that didn't stop wide receiver Demarcus Robinson from getting his touches. He ended the day with six catches for 123 yards and one touchdown. With Jeff Driskell once again showing the promise we saw in 2012, expect for him to utilize the sophomore Robinson as his big-play receiver against a surging, but far-from-perfect Kentucky team.

PREPARE LIKE A CHAMPION

Tennessee is off to a 2-0 start, having beating Utah State and Arkansas State to start the season. But are the Volunteers up for this? Oklahoma, also 2-0, looks to be the same team that steamrolled Alabama in the Sugar Bowl last season. This one's fun for a variety of reasons. It will show us just how far the Volunteers have come over the offseason and in the Butch Jones era, and it's another chance to see how a mediocre SEC team stacks up against one of the best non-SEC teams in the country. If Tennessee pulls off the upset, it's a huge victory for that program and for anyone who waves the SEC banner. If the Volunteers lose, what else is new?

"The Golden Knights have had two weeks to stew over a last-second loss to Penn State in Ireland, while Mizzou has started slow against South Dakota St. and Toledo. As the Gamecocks learned, UCF won't back down from an SEC opponent."

7:30 ON ESPN
The Hokies are riding high after taking down Ohio State last weekend and East Carolina has shown recently it can hang with (or beat) bigger-name teams. The Pirates lost a close one last season to Tech, and ECU's offense against Tech's strong defense this year is a very intriguing matchup.

10:30 ON CBS SPORTS
"Need a solid game to watch when you get home from all the madness of the USC-UGA game? This one doesn't start until late and could be a fairly close game, which is more than can be said for most other games Saturday."

8:00 ON FOX
"UCLA and Texas haven't gotten off to a great start, with the Bruins beating Virginia and Memphis by just one score each and the Longhorns getting booted by BYU last week. Maybe playing each other in Jerry's World will help."

MIKE DAVIS

Junior Running Back

Mike Davis looked like the Mike Davis of old last week against East Carolina, gaining 129 total yards and two touchdowns on 21 touches. The junior tailback had a breakout game in a losing effort at Georgia last season, tallying 149 rushing yards and a touchdown, and the Gamecocks will need a similar performance from him this time around. Davis is a Georgia native, but the Bulldogs were initially hesitant to offer the former four-star recruit a scholarship, ultimately going instead with a pair of four-star recruits named Todd Gurley and Keith Marshall. That's the kind of thing that sticks with Davis; maybe he'll be running angry - again - on Saturday.

VEGAS REPORT

The Wynn in Las Vegas opened UGA as a 3.5-point favorite on Sunday for its crucial SEC showdown at South Carolina before quickly moving the line down to three. Within a few hours, however, the number was up to 5.5. By lunch on Monday, the line had settled at six at most books. As of Thursday morning, most betting shops had Georgia installed as a six-point favorite. The total for 'over/under' wagers was 60 points. Gamblers can take the Gamecocks to win outright for a +190 payout (risk $100 to win $190).

Gurley set a school record in the season-opener against Clemson with 293 all-purpose yards. The Heisman candidate averaged 13.2 yards per carry against the Tigers en route to a career-high 198 yards on the ground. Gurley also scored on a 100-yard kickoff return, the second of his career. Don't be surprised if QB Hutson Mason looks for him out of the backfield; Gurley has averaged 10.2 yards per reception in his career.

PREDICTIONS

Wes Mitchell

I'm expecting some scoring. Georgia should be able to run the football on Carolina. But the Gamecocks should be able to exploit the Bulldogs' secondary. Georgia simply doesn't play well in Columbia. Carolina pulls the upset.

Rixon Lane

Despite last week's win, South Carolina still has defensive issues. Few teams in the country have been able to stop Todd Gurley and the Gamecock offense won't be able to keep up.

Jeff Tyner

This series is always close, even when the talent gap was wide. Yards will be given up, but can the defense force some timely turnovers and key 3rd down stops? Confidence will be king.

Aaron Weiss

A battle of two running games, with each quarterback making errors. Defense will be better than we all think.

The Greenwood native did not draw a lot of interest out of high school, but as a 6-foot-4, 270-pounder in junior college he picked up offers from Alabama to Southern Cal. The midyear enrollee committed to USC over the summer and will be able to go through spring practice next year, helping to bolster a defensive end group that is looking for an influx of talent.

EASY PULLED PORK BBQ

INGREDIENTS

2 tbsp. salt
2 tbsp. pepper
1 1/2 tsp. cayenne pepper
2 tbsp. dark brown sugar
2 tbsp. paprika
4-lb. pork shoulder roast
2 cups apple juice
1 cup apple cider vinegar
2 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
2 tsp. Liquid Smoke
2 tsp. garlic powder

DIRECTIONS

Mix the first five ingredients in a small bowl. Rub the mixture all over the pork roast, pressing it into the meat. Wrap the roast in plastic wrap, put it on a plate, and refrigerate for at least 2 hours, preferably up to 24 hours.

When ready to cook, heat the oven to 325 degrees. Combine the remaining ingredients in a medium bowl and pour into a large Dutch oven that has a lid. Put the pork in the Dutch oven and cover tightly with aluminum foil, then with the pot lid. Roast for 4 hours, basting occasionally with the cooking liquid. The pork is done when it's fork-tender. Remove from the oven and let stand until cool enough to handle.

Shred the pork with forks or just pull it apart into bite-size shreds. Serve on hamburger buns or slider rolls, topped with your favorite barbecue sauce and cole slaw. Serves 6-8.

A few years back I heard a bunch of chefs from across the Southeast talking about the defining ingredient in Southern cooking. Rice and corn (as in grits) seemed to be dominating the discussion until one chef said, "For my money, the defining ingredient in Southern cooking is pork."

The talk ended right there – no one could successfully challenge that. It's not just the meat itself that defines our cuisine, but all the other ways that pork flavor has always seeped its delicious way into our cuisine, via products such as smoked ham hocks, bacon drippings, lard and more.

When it comes to the highest and best uses for pork, barbecue's at or near the top of the list for many of us. With a huge game looming Saturday against Georgia – a game that might be a defining ingredient in how the SEC East turns out – it's time for some serious food, and this easy pulled pork fills the bill. A heads-up: The meat has to rest in its dry rub in the fridge for at least 2 hours, but preferably overnight, and it takes about 4 hours to cook, so don't wait until Saturday morning to start pulling this together.

This recipe, which originated with Paula Deen, calls for pork shoulder. The shoulder is the whole front leg and shoulder of the hog. Grocery stores usually make a shoulder into two cuts: the Boston butt and the picnic. Although "butt" makes it sound like this cut is from the pig's hindquarters, it's actually from the upper front section of the shoulder.

I like to use the picnic for this recipe since it typically seems to have a little more bone, and that adds a little extra flavor. But some good friends that I've shared this recipe with swear by a Boston butt, and they're so sold on this particular recipe that they refuse to even try any other.

The picnics I see in my store are usually right around 4 pounds, which is what this recipe calls for, but if you find a larger or smaller cut, you can adjust the cooking time as needed. If you have any leftovers, they freeze really well; use some of the cooking liquid with the meat when you freeze it, and it'll stay nice and moist.
